GENERAL NOTES

1. Draft for comment. A two-bedroom apartment on the roof: two bedrooms, a small kitchen, a bath and a living room opening onto the terrace — 72.0 m² indoors against 63.1 m² of terrace.

2. The south wall sits on the column grid at y 8.46. The third floor under it is an open living area, so a 300 mm wall anywhere else would be a line load mid-span; on the grid it bears onto the beam between the columns at x 12.65, 17.46 and 21.85. East, west and north it sits on the external walls below.

3. That costs the living room its depth — 3.81 m rather than the 5 m it would like. It is the right trade: the terrace is the living space up here.

4. The terrace runs from that wall out over the cantilever, so the wave is carried to the top and reads as one gesture over four levels rather than three balconies under a flat roof. A 2.50 m pergola shades the glazing, on posts over the column lines.

5. Tanks and condensers sit behind a 1.80 m screen at the blind west edge. Bedroom 1 at 18.8 m² has room for an ensuite if wanted.

6. The site plan, section A—A and the A-300 enlargements are still on the old 11.50 × 14.50 footprint.
